Seminars were engaging and intersting
The documents and texts we were given to read were interesting and the discussions that we would have in class were also interesting.
This class was led through readings and discussion. I found both very helpful.
The class discussions allowed us to engage with the course readings and dive deeper into the meanings of main course topics.

Thinking about your time in the class, what aspect of the instructor's teaching contributed most to your learning?

Comments
Awesome prof and seminars were very engaging and thought provoking
The class was not taught as a history which forced to think about the topics we were discussing about differently.
Professor Johnson is really good at directing class discussion. She does a very great job of pulling the interesting ideas out of class discussion and leading a class towards them.
The instructor guided class discussions and offered great analysis regarding course readings and valuable topics.

What could the instructor modify to help you learn more?

Comments
Nothing
Call out the ~75% of kids who sat in the back on their computers and said nothing the entire quarter. It's detrimental to the entire classroom.
I think that more contextual conversation would be helpful. Professor Johnson is very knowledgeable about this period of American History and the little context she did provide was very enlightening.

Comments
I didn't think the difficulty of the course was bad
This course is not very difficult. It is interesting and totally manageable. I will say that having a good grasp on nineteenth century American history helps immensely in this class.
Not difficult at all, although because it continues off the prior class in the sequence, it may be useful to take this class following the first one.
