What are the most important things that you learned in this course? Please reflect on the knowledge and skills you gained.

Comments
Smith's and Marx's philosophies and critiques on society, deconstructing an argument but proffering a unique interpretation at the same time
Smith's Wealth of Nations and the expectation of capital as a socioeconomic practice as well the subversion of these expectations in reality with Marx's Capital.
Smithian economics and Marxian political economy.

Describe how aspects of this course (lectures, discussions, labs, assignments, etc.) contributed to your learning.

Comments
Attending seminars was essential to understanding the material, as well as unsettling any confusion.
Reading and well-lead seminar discussions.
Class dicussions and Prof Nogales' explanations on key concepts and patience to make sure we understood them was very helpful

Thinking about your time in the class, what aspect of the instructor's teaching contributed most to your learning?

Comments
Her input during seminars as well as group work. Helped identify the concepts that were integral to the reading as well as not to get lost in the weeds.
The professor understands well the concepts that the authors use and leads the discussions to help the students construe these concepts.

What could the instructor modify to help you learn more?

Comments
Possibly clarifying expectations for the papers and presentation. It was difficult to know what an A entailed at times.
It would be better if more feedback on reading responses was provided.

Comments
Very challenging and reading intensive, but manageable if you put in the work.
It takes some time to make sense of some concepts as someone who does not study sociology/political philosophy and is interested in it.
