What are the most important things that you learned in this course? Please reflect on the knowledge and skills you gained.

Comments
How to write essays
Poetry and crisis, politics
How to better analyze poetry and create an argument around it.
Structure of poetry, poetry and crisis, poetry and performance, poetry and politics.
Reading poetry in conjunction with types of media / arts; poetry in the face of crises. Most important things that I learned in this course are how to unpack tensions, how to conduct close-reading with context in mind, and how does the reader or audience play a role in helping poetry mean.

Describe how aspects of this course (lectures, discussions, labs, assignments, etc.) contributed to your learning.

We analysed poems
Discussions were helpful
Lots of very interesting readings and analyses. I appreciated the weekly opportunity to practice close reading (canvas discussion posts) and having the 2 close reading assignments as p/f also gave me room to explore and improve.
The seminars inspired me to interpret poetry from different perspectives.
Classes were seminar-style, so engaging with Prof. Broughton's questions and classmates' responses brought new insights and pushed me to approach works of poetry from different angles.

Thinking about your time in the class, what aspect of the instructor's teaching contributed most to your learning?

Comments
Analysing poems and giving background
Lecturing and discussions
Great feedback and in class discussions.
My instructor's explanations of the poem's background and his guidance in discussion contributed most to my learning.
Prof. Broughton often provided context on works that we'd discuss in class. His questions, major ones + follow-ups, fostered the discussion well. And always, pushing us to "say a bit more" helped me really think and interact with texts beyond surface level.

What could the instructor modify to help you learn more?

Comments
Be clearer about the standard for success
Nothing
Some feedback on canvas posts would be good, but not hugely important.
