Comments
This was probably the most challenging life of the mind course I've taken due to the content since I didn't have any knowledge of gender theory beforehand and all the texts were the foundations of what constitutes gender studies today
Lectures were really helpful in understanding the (at times) challenging texts. Prof Trujillo was always very energetic and helped facilitate interesting conversation around the readings. I enjoyed the multimedia nature of our readings this quarter as well.
The discussions always felt engaging. The last trip to the Hyde park art exhibit was really great and helped us be immersed in what we read.
Professor Trujillo is really good at keeping the class engaged with discussions and he makes the topics really interesting even if they are difficult

I wish Prof Turjillo explained some of the theory in a less convoluted way. The complicated vocab and jargon he used sometimes made the discussion inaccessible for me to talk in since I felt I couldn't grasp the main ideas he wanted us to get at.

I would recommend this course to:

Thinking about your time in the class, what aspect of the instructor's teaching contributed most to your learning?

Comments
Professor Trujillo's broad, but incisive, base of knowledge was always helpful in contextualizing our readings in the broader scheme of the course.
It was really helpful when he pulled up examples outside of the reading for us to discuss together.

What could the instructor modify to help you learn more?

Comments
I think having a little more prep for the midterm assignment would have been helpful, maybe working through an example in class could have been useful. I know it was the first time I have had to write an essay of that style, so it was a little challenging to get started.
