Challenges to traditional societal perceptions of gender and sexuality
I learned how to think about issues from a higher level.
How to be more empathetic and aware of the social pressures around me that don't impact me, and also identifying the sources of pressure better in my own life.
Idea of biopower, queer theory, privatization of sex, sex work
The different definitions and political connotations of being queer, how we can imagine a different/better future

Describe how aspects of this course (lectures, discussions, labs, assignments, etc.) contributed to your learning.

Comments
Discussions and student presentations were helpful with sitting with the materials. The professor's overviews of the reading were good for making sure we understood key concepts from the readings.
C Snorton did an amazing job facilitating the discussions. It was really empowering to have a teacher with such a unique background.
Class discussions were great! Professor Snorton would organize clear questions for us to talk about.
Professor Snorton was a very good lecturer and very good at directing and synthesizing our class discussions. The main assignments (2 essays) allowed us to choose how we wanted to demonstrate our knowledge (eg more creatively or analytically) thereby reducing stress.

Thinking about your time in the class, what aspect of the instructor's teaching contributed most to your learning?

Overviews of reading
They're patience and insight
Professor Snorton did a great job of creating an environment in which everyone felt comfortable sharing their ideas. He raised interesting discussion questions and mediated discussion appropriately (in terms of shaping discussion with his own ideas or questions).
He would reinforce what a student had contributed in a way that made me remember the key points from class. It was like a micro-gist of what had just been said.
He did a really good job of breaking down what to take away from the readings, especially the longer ones.
I think Professor Snorton brings up valuable information from his own experiences and perspectives that added another layer to the readings.
As mentioned above, Professor Snorton was a great lecturer and great at building off of students' comments to synthesize what we said with our readings. He was also very good at balancing the class discussion to allow everyone a chance to speak.

What could the instructor modify to help you learn more?

Comments
I had no background and did not find this course to be too difficult
8/10
Not too difficult! I don't really have any experience in the topic but the readings are fairly approachable.
I've completed HUM/SOSC and taken some other SOCI/GNSE electives and I found this class very reasonable.
