Ye laoshi is wonderful
The textbook is fine in terms of language practice and learning, but it's also extremely normative in terms of gender, sexuality, class, etc., which sometimes makes speaking practice awkward.
We were basically taught out of the textbook + some extra notes on the slides. This was a good thing—the textbook was very good and so were the slides.

Was the vocabulary useful?

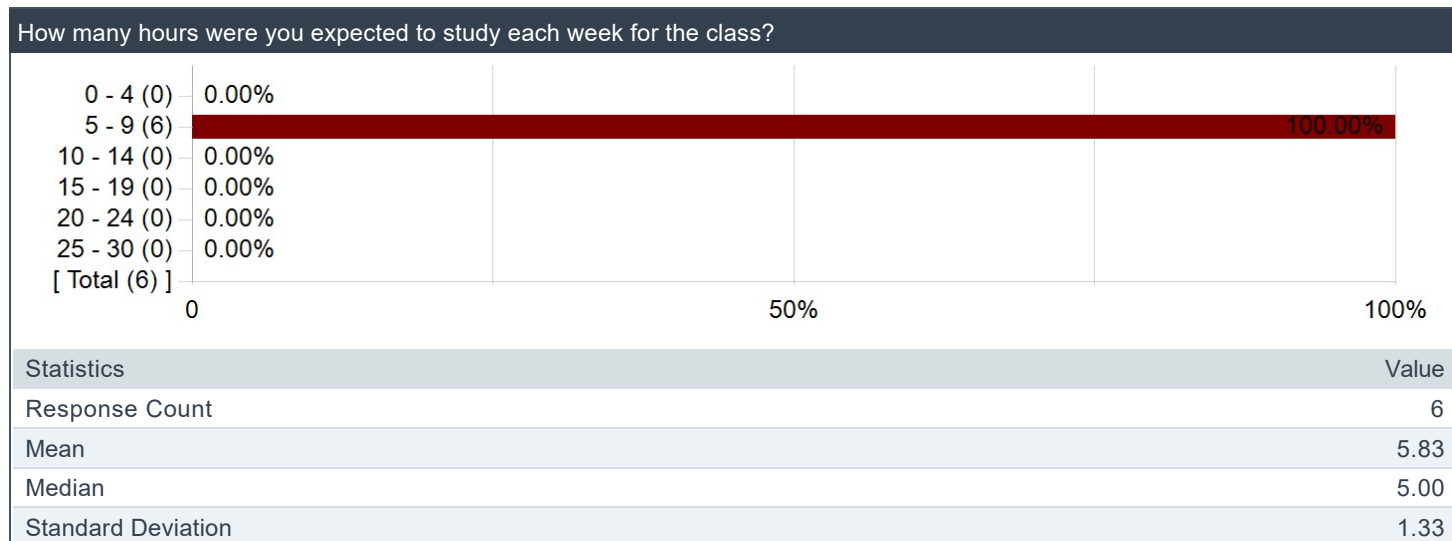

Why?

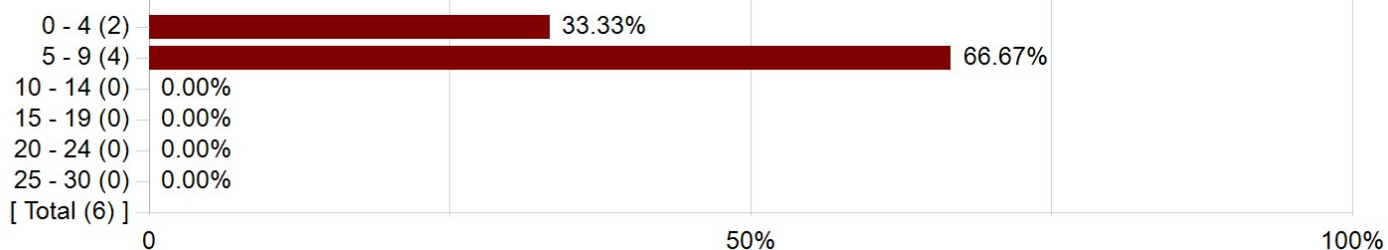

Comments
Chinese is good
I've already used the vocabulary in my daily life.
One of my favorite things about this course was that the vocab was very conversationally focused. I never felt like I was learning something esoteric/something that wouldn't help me in the future.
Focused on different aspects of life and culture

Describe the format of the class (lecture, drills, etc.). Was this format productive? Please be specific.

Comments
tons of practice, this is best for learning language, tons of student engagement
Lecture every day with vocab quizzes twice a week. Unit test for every 2 units. It was very productive, we got through a lot of material and everyone seemed to learn it well.
Quiz on vocabulary every few days, it was productive.

Organizing thoughts and articulating them is very different from just knowing the vocabulary
Two of them were audio recordings, one was a video presentation, and one was live. All tested our knowledge of vocab, grammar, and pronunciation.

Ye laoshi followed the Integrated Chinese Book and facilitated our discussions with her slides very well
Every day a presentation was prepared

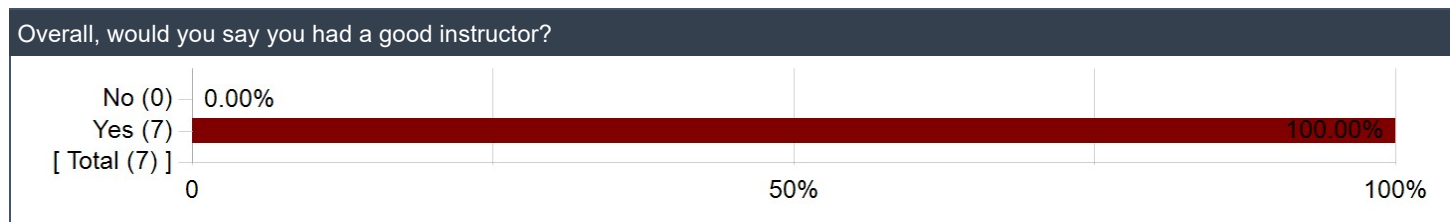

Were cultural units included?

Were they interesting or helpful?

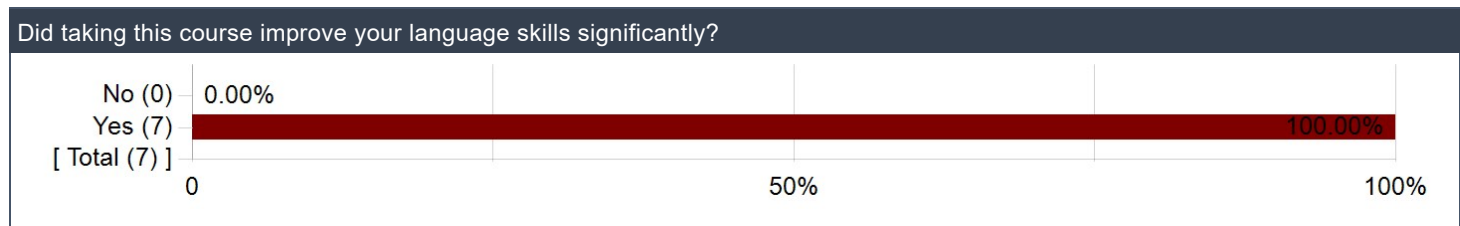

Overall, would you say you had a good instructor?

Why?

Comments
Ye laoshi knows chinese
Laoshi is the best!
The best Chinese teacher ever.
The best thing about Ye Lao Shi is that she made a classroom environment that I looked forward to showing up in basically every day. 5 times a week is a lot of class, so it's vital that it not feel like a slog to get through, otherwise you burn out incredibly quickly—and I was honestly sad when this class ended. She is thoughtful, understanding, and is very welcoming. I often don't write course reviews, but I had to do this one so I could sing her praises.
