Thinking unconventionally and not getting too attached to one idea.
This course will give you what you put into it. There are no right or wrong answers but you'll be miserable if you're unwilling to engage with the course. If you lose your ego for a few hours a week and absorb what this class is about, you might learn something about yourself. If that sounds too fringe, you're probably best to take an Econ elective instead.
Such a great class on finding the bit of artistic talent we all have inside of us
How to view art and other things from different perspectives, seeing things you didn't see before. Pushing yourself outside of your comfort zone and putting pen to paper.

Describe how aspects of this course (lectures, discussions, labs, assignments, etc.) contributed to your learning.

Comments
I think that the first collages really helped me understand what the process and way of approaching making the next collages should be like.
The class time was largely used to further develop projects although you expected to use time outside of class to progress as well. Professor Peters was terrific and really loves teaching this class.
There was no structure which I loved. It was about doing art. Not lectures or any of that. Just working on your pieces
We worked on the same collage prompts for majority of the class, and I think all of the different iterations really helped the final piece take on a life of its own. Prof Peter's one on one comments really helped take the pieces further, and pushed you to try new things. Similarly discussions about the entire class's pieces was nice to get inspiration.

Thinking about your time in the class, what aspect of the instructor's teaching contributed most to your learning?

Comments
Mostly the commentary and suggestions he would make when I was working on a collage.
Professor Roberts challenges your approach to creating art and the way you think. He does a great job of relating his class to the rest of life if you take the time to listen.
Professor would come around and just talk to us about our progress. He wouldn't say we have to or cannot do something. he would just tell us how he feels and it was up to us to take into account his advice.
Prof Peters is amazing. His one on one comments helped me realize patterns that were coming up in my pieces that were more difficult for me to put into words.
Good feedback
